

SOUNDWAVE 2013

Monday, 6 1/2 hours at Soundwave with Lyle & Milks & 40,000 others lived up to all our expectations. We got fab shady possy in fenced off area of Stage 1. Kicked off with Slayer, then A Perfect Circle, Blink 182, it got a tad scary when the exclusion barriers were pushed down & there was some serious malevolent biff between insurgents & security & anyone, like us, in the way. Greg got pushed over, I got punched in the chest the crowd was manic "Quelle surprise" ! Thankfully security gave in & let everyone in & we all went back to grooving along. Then Linkin Park - so damn fine. Eventually, I HAD to go to a loo. I am SO going to find me some of those astronaut pants, cause I never ever want to go back into a porta-loo without lights, everything was WET, knew not to expect a good experience but Greg HAD to come save me! Sampled a bit of unknown band Sleeping With Sirens on Stage 3 enroute to Stage 2 We stopped to eat bad burgers, but found CHAIRS! Greg went back to see some Metalica while I rested & listened to Shirley Manson & Garbage. Greg back in time for The Offspring - mega, awesome, so good, absolutely the band whom everyone knew every word to every song, crazy dancing, people on roofs, just b4 they ended back to Metalica, loud, frenzied, explosive. So-o-o buggered, but alive. We jagged the trains, but were mildly indignant when offered the seniors seats on both trains! Home b4 11pm still pumped so wine & whiskey & fell asleep on sofa.
